DANGERS FACING THE HOME
-Discipline

Parents are charged with instilling self-discipline in their children. The process of building this character is by discipline. Homes disintegrate when parents refuse or neglect to instill self-discipline in their children. This is what fills our prisons, substance abuse facilities, divorce courts and juvenile facilities. The process of disciplining children is two-fold. It begins with and never stops teaching. The parents' job is to teach what is right, from the brushing of teeth and wearing of clean clothes to the reading and knowledge of the scriptures. The second part is corrective. The child who won't "come" when momma calls must be corrected. If you can't instill this at ages one and two it may be hopelessly too late at sixteen.

The wisdom of Solomon states, "Foolishness is bound in the heart of a child; but the rod of correction shall drive it far from him" (Proverbs 22:15). To the shame of otherwise good men the Bible gives examples of men who failed. Eli, the high priest, failed to restrain his sons. They treated their priestly office with contempt and God judged Eli for it because he failed to restrain them (1 Samuel 3:13). The Ark of the Covenant fell into the hands of the Philistines for a time because of it… (1 Samuel 4:1-11). The danger is not just to the home when self-discipline and discipline fails. Step by step society crumbles when there are no God-designed homes for our children.

Where do great leaders come from? They come from great homes. Outside the Lord's mighty hand, where does safety lie? It lies where our armed forces believe in the worth of hearth and home. Where does the church find good elders, deacons, and preachers? And where are those good ladies that finish the forming of the backbone of every good congregation?

They come from good homes; homes where parents exercised self-discipline and taught discipline to their children. I know my knowledge of leadership in the church worldwide is not vast, but, in my experience, leaders who do not come from good, stable, disciplined homes are few and far between.Exercise self-discipline in your home. Be true to your vows. Leave alcohol alone. Exercise kindness. Teach your children, and straighten them out when they stray. Have a great home.

We're depending on you!
