Ours Is Not to Reason Why

Alfred, Lord Tennyson wrote a poem, The Charge of the Light Brigade, memorializing a suicide charge by British cavalry during the Crimean war. While the orders did not make military sense, the cavalry charged the Russian artillery position without question. Tennyson wrote, "Theirs not to make reply, theirs not to reason why, theirs but to do and die: into the valley of death rode the six hundred." Regardless of whether they understood or agreed with the orders, they obeyed because they were submissive to the chain of command. No questions, no arguments, just obedience.

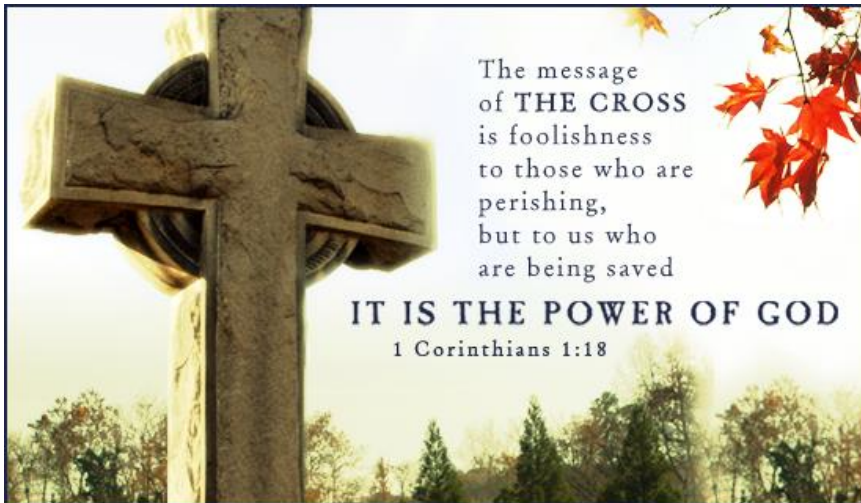

There are two Old Testament characters who may be used to illustrate this attitude. Noah was told to build an ark because God was going to destroy all flesh. Despite the fact that it had never rained and Noah could not possibly imagine a world-wide flood, he did according to all that God commanded him (Gen 6:22). Abraham was told to leave his country and kindred and go to a land where he had never been. Later he was told to offer his promised son, Isaac, as a sacrifice to God. Like Noah, Abraham obeyed God. We have no indication that there was any hesitation, questioning, or thought of rebellion by either of these men.

Theirs was not to reason why. Each of them was interested in obeying God.

Thus, Noah and Abraham serve as obedient examples as we consider what God has required of us if we are to be his children. Though it seems to be difficult for man to accept anything without question or debate, God's expectations of man are not arguable. There should be no question regarding how we are saved and how we are to worship Him. While God's way may seem foolish to many (1 Cor 1:18), it is the only way to salvation and is not for us to question. We do not have to understand why God chose baptism, for example, as the means through which we contact the redeeming power of Jesus' blood. No amount of discussion, arguing, or questioning will change the necessity of our obedience to the command. We should need no other reason than God said to do it. Ours is not to reason why, ours is but to do OR die. May we develop the proper attitude of acceptance and submission to the will of God that He may grant unto us eternal life.
